Dear Richard,

I am very proud to be patron of the Kay Mason Foundation and I commend you most warmly for your initiative in wanting to make a difference in the lives of young South Africans.

Sadly, a very small minority of children in South Africa have access to quality education. Education is the key to the future. The Kay Mason Foundation seeks to change the lives of just a few young people, to enable them to realize their potential and to unlock the leadership capacity within them. It is focused assistance around the needs of a selected few. The personal contact between the benefactor and the beneficiary is a tremendous bonus to the program, a relationship in which I believe both parties will find that they are greatly enriched.

The world has been changed by individuals. We have a role model in former President Mandela. I am convinced there are others if they only had the opportunity.

I urge our international friends to join the Global Allies and Global Mentor program connecting as many of our scholars as possible with allies and leading experts in the wider world who can help and inspire them.

Our scholars need you, your skill, your network, expertise, and encouragement.

God bless you.

Archbishop Emeritus Desmond Tutu
